A SOUTHERN VOLUNTEER.

From a Southern Newspaper.

Yes, sir, I fought with Stonewall,
And faced the fight with Lee;
But if this here Union goes to war,
Make one more gun for me!
I didn't shrink for Sherman
As he galloped to the sea;
But if this here Union goes to war,
Make one more gun for me!

I was with 'em at Manassas—
The bully boys in gray;
I heard the thunders roarin'
Round Stonewall Jackson's way.
And many a time this sword of mine
Has blazed the route for Lee,
But if this old Union goes to war,
Make one more gun for me!

I'm not so full of fightin',
Nor half so full o' fun
As I was back in the sixties
When I shouldered my old gun;
It may be that my hair is white,
Such things, you know, must be;
But if this old Union's in for fight,
Make one more gun for me!

I hain't forgot my raisin',
Nor how, in sixty-two,
Or thereabouts, with battle shouts
I charged the boys in blue;
And I say: I fought with Stonewall,
And blazed the way with Lee;
But if this old Union's in for war,
Make one more gun for me!

LEE'S DEFEAT AT GETTYSBURG.

Who Was Responsible—Himself or Longstreet?

Nearly ever since that battle there has been more or less "heat" between the friends of the two generals, Lee and Longstreet, to throw the blame of the defeat on the one or the other of these officers and exonerate the other. The following carefully prepared article by Capt. Leslie J. Perry, which appeared in the New York Sun in a November issue, seems to meet the views of many soldiers of both armies.

Our attention was called to the article by Col. W. D. Dixon, of St. Thomas, who commanded the 6th Penna. Reserves in that battle and afterwards, and was one of the observant participants in that memorable fight. He thinks the article the fairest and most correct of any criticism he has seen on the battle:

When Gen. Fitz-Hugh Lee's biography of his distinguished uncle, Gen. R. E. Lee, was announced, it was anticipated eagerly that much new and valuable matter would be discovered concerning the interesting contention as to which, if either, was responsible for the Confederate defeat at Gettysburg—Lee, the chief, or Longstreet, the lieutenant. But the otherwise brilliant little book is a complete disappointment in respect of its Gettysburg chapter, which is simply a thrashing over of old straw. There is a palpable effort to "handle Longstreet without gloves," but disclosing so much feeling, and so manifestly unfair as to prove abortive of its author's purpose.

To the unbiased Yankee spectator this Lee-Longstreet-Gettysburg feud has been one of extraordinary interest and profit. Longstreet claims that it had its origin in the early determination of the Virginia contingent that always dominated Southern military affairs, to make him—a South Carolinian—the scapegoat of Lee's blunders at Gettysburg. It dates back many years. The irreconcilable participants, exhausted of all legitimate resources of citation and logic—totally oblivious of the unities as well as the probabilities—have recourse finally to noisy assertion and innocuous vituperation. The old axiom, "When thieves fall out honest folk come by their deserts" applies in a certain sense to this quarrel, which has been of real service to the cause of truth by quickening and fixing public attention upon the minutest details of Gettysburg, but chiefly from having forced from high Confederate sources many important facts—I may say admissions—of great historical importance.

It is not designed to depreciate the military idol of the South, but as scores of facile pens have undertaken to shift all responsibility for Gettysburg from Lee to his faithful subordinate, it is only fair, without prejudice, to subject Fitz Lee's fresh arraignment of Longstreet—in the nature of a summing up—to the test of the official records and established facts, and, if possible, set apart the truth from the chaff of unsupported assumption, assertion, and supposition.

Summarized, the essential complaints against Longstreet are these: That he was opposed to fighting an offensive battle at all, and hence tardy, even obstructive—Fitz Lee says "balky and stubborn"—in carrying out Lee's orders; that he disobeyed an order to attack at sunrise or other early hour on July 2; that, again, ordered to give battle on the morning of July 3 with half the army, he was culpably slow, finally only attacking with Pickett's weak division, aided by some of Hill's troops, and was consequently repulsed; in fine, that these faults disconcerted Lee's plans and caused Confederate defeat.

Longstreet, in substance, admits that he did oppose fighting the enemy on his chosen ground at Gettysburg, but suggested to Lee the easy and effective alternative of moving around Meade's left toward Washington, forcing him, without a battle, to fall back and attack them; he states, further, that Lee strangely persisted in fighting the enemy where he was, and seemed to have lost his "matchless equipoise;" that he faithfully carried out all Lee's orders on that field; that the defeat was largely, if not wholly, due to lack of concert which the General-in-Chief alone could command; that he protested firmly against the Pickett charge as a useless sacrifice of life; and finally that Lee said to him, "The defeat was all my fault," and "you [Longstreet] ought not to have made that last attack."

As Fitz Lee cites nothing to support his claim that Lee "was under no obligation to any one to fight a defensive battle," it must stand as only a guess formulated into an assertion of a desired fact. The testimony as well as the probabilities are against him. Longstreet says positively that Lee agreed before marching to act tactically on the defensive; in plain English, the invading army was to be so manœuvered as to compel the enemy to attack. Longstreet in this is distinctly confirmed by Lee's report, * which thus disposes of Fitz Lee's assertion: "It had not been intended to fight a general battle at such a distance from our base unless attacked by the enemy."

All Longstreet's critics pay little heed to the documentary history of the campaign. Fitz Lee's somewhat rhetorical deliverance that "Lee sought the enemy's soil to gain a victory, whether by defensive or offensive tactics, and his objective point was the Army of the Potomac," is definitely contradicted by Lee's report quoted above. The objects of the invasion, if we may believe Lee's official statement, was to transfer hostilities north of the Potomac; relieve the pressure on Vicksburg by menacing Northern cities; feed his army; break up Union plans for the summer, and incidentally to strike a blow under favorable auspices. A decisive victory was doubtless very desirable, but it cannot be credited that solely in search of a tilt with the Army of the Potomac at any odds Lee marched 200 miles away from it. The single object of battle was easily attainable any day along the Rappahannock "near his base," with a far more promising outlook for success than the forlorn hope waged at Gettysburg. Longstreet clearly states the truth—Lee originally contemplated to fight only a defensive battle on ground selected by himself. He lost his "matchless equipoise," elected to fight on his enemy's field, and was defeated. "He whom the gods would destroy they first make mad."

To demonstrate that Gettysburg was lost by a mere fluke his fond admirers are compelled to assert as a premise that Lee from the first moment knew Meade's army was not concentrated, and fully expected to destroy it in detail. When full access was had to the Union version of Gettysburg, his keen partisan discovered that a very early attack on the 2d had in it a chance of success. Longstreet's assailants thereupon assert that on the evening of July 1 Lee decided to attack Meade's left "early the next day with Longstreet's two divisions that were within reach." In his report Lee modifies this determination in respect of time very materially, as follows: "Not to attack until the arrival of Longstreet, two of whose divisions [those of Hood and McLaws] encamped about four miles in the rear in the night." The rest of Longstreet's corps on the night of the 1st were located as follows: Law's brigade was watching the roads twenty-four miles west of Gettysburg; Cabell's artillery was "encamped a few miles from Gettysburg;" Henry's and Alexander's battalions of artillery, twelve or thirteen miles back, and Pickett's division of infantry was at Chambersburg, twenty-eight miles off. These facts are compiled from official reports.

Nobody has deigned to examine the march of Longstreet's troops to join in the ill-starred fight at Gettysburg. His accusers vaguely allude to them as being "within reach" on the second. Their readers naturally jump to the conclusion—as it is perhaps intended they should—that he was at the point of contact with the enemy, ready to strike the Union left at sunrise and speedily wipe it out.

This was far from being the case, as the records demonstrate.

Longstreet's candor has been questioned by Col. William Allan, a painstaking and unusually fair commentator, for stating that his "command was at the close of the first day's fight fifteen or twenty miles west of the field." As the fight ended at 4 p. m., Longstreet must have been literally correct; McLaws was fully fifteen miles away, Hood's division was still further back, and McLaws brigade was twenty-four miles off. Allan falls into error in hastily assuming, apparently, that Longstreet said "close of the first day."

Col. Allan says it is "abundantly shown" that Longstreet was "ordered" to attack "early in the morning." "There is not one word in the Confederate official reports to warrant this claim; on the contrary, they flatly dispute it. It rests purely on oral statements made since the war. In the absence of confirmatory records, of course, the best testimony on this head would be that of Lee and Longstreet themselves. Lee is dead and cannot speak, but Longstreet is alive and categorically denies that he received any order to attack early next morning, or at any other specific hour, and the records confirm him.

And the oral testimony cited in its support is found to be on examination unsatisfactory and contradictory. Among those approvingly quoted, by whom it is "abundantly shown" Lee made such an order, is Gen. William N. Pendleton, his chief of artillery. In an address delivered at Lexington, Va., on January 17, 1873, Pendleton made this statement:

The ground southwest of the town was carefully examined by me after the engagement of July 1 * * * Its practicable character was reported to our commanding General. He informed me that he had ordered Longstreet to attack on that front at sunrise next morning, And he added to myself, "I want you to be out long before sunrise so as to re-examine and save time." He also desired me to communicate with Gen. Longstreet, as well as himself. The reconnoissance was accordingly made as soon as it was light enough on the 2d. * * * All this, as it occurred under my personal observation, it is nothing short of imperative duty that I thus fairly state.

Let us see how "fairly" this is stated. Fulminated ten years after Gettysburg and three after Gen. Lee's death, this improbable sunrise story was at the outset tainted with the poisonous suspicion of being an afterthought. If anything further were needed than Longstreet's positive denial, confirmed by four of Lee's staff officers, Pendleton himself stamps the story as false in his official report of Gettysburg, in which he says:

* * * From the furthest occupied point on the right and front in company with Cols. Long and Walker and Capt. Johnston (engineer) soon after sunrise (July 2) I surveyed the enemy's position toward some estimate of the ground and the best mode of attack. To attack on that side if practicable I understood to be the purpose of the commanding General. Returning from this position more to the right and rear, for the sake of tracing more exactly the mode of approach * * * I returned to an elevated point on the Fairfield road * * * and despatched messengers to Gen. Longstreet and the commanding General. * * * This point was after some time examined by Col. Smith and Capt. Johnston, and about midday Gen. Longstreet arrived and viewed the ground. * * * These woods having thus been cleared of the enemy, some view of the ground beyond them * * * seemed practicable. I therefore rode in that direction, and when about to enter the woods met the commanding General (Lee) en route himself to survey the ground. There being still a good deal of sharpshooting, the front had to be examined with caution. * * * Having noticed the field and the enemy's batteries, &c., I returned to Gen. Longstreet for the purpose of conducting his column to this point, and supervising, as might be necessary, the dispostion of his artillery. * * Cabell's, Alexander's and Henry's artillery at length arrived, and the whole column moved toward the enemy's left. The enemy opened a furious cannonade, the course of which rendered necessary a change in the main artillery column. * *

Pendleton says Lee ordered him to "be out long before sunrise to re-examine and save time," thus enabling Longstreet to obey an order to attack precisely at sunrise, and this reconnoissance was made "as soon as it was light enough on the 2d," whereas in the written report it was not until "soon after sunrise that Pendleton, Long, Walker, and Johnston—all staff officers, but none of them of Longstreet's staff—went forth to determine where, how, and when to attack, as well as its actual feasibility. In the "sunrise story" he says positively that Lee had not only fixed a definite point and hour, but had ordered the attack to be made; in the report he merely understood it to be Lee's intention to attack "on that side," if practicable. It is therefore certain that previous to Pendleton's reconnoissance its practicability had not bee decided upon. As late as after midday Lee himself had come upon that front to survey the ground. The report belies Pendleton's subsequent story in all essential points. And the report is confirmed in every particular by Lee's report, and also by Longstreet's.

It shows that Longstreet was waiting for Lee and Pendleton to select the battlefield. No intelligent and candid reader of that document can doubt this. It shows also that Pendleton's preliminary examinations were made under greatest difficulties, and were necessarily protracted over several hours. Nobody was in fact blamable for the delays. They were not made by Longstreet, but by Lee's confidential, trusted friend, Pendleton, assisted by Lee's military secretary, Long, and the engineer officers of Lee's staff, under Lee's personal observation. After riding to and fro for hours, Pendleton despatched messengers to Longstreet and Lee, proving that they were awaiting his report. When he was satisfied as to the proper procedure, Pendleton returned to conduct Longstreet's column of attack. He makes no allusion to impatience on Lee's part at any "balky stubbornness" of Longstreet's. An exhibition of such import would certainly have found place in his report.

Thus Pendleton makes it clear that there was no "unaccountable" delay in the movement of the 2d. Brushing aside all special pleading for sinister purposes, it is evident that Lee was directing in person and acutely cognizant of all that was going forward. The country was open and rolling, and of all his battlefields this of Gettysburg from start to finish was most under his immediate eye. If there was delay, he understood the cause, and was present to remedy it if practicable, and to infuse energy into his subordinates.

In officially reciting the events of a far-reaching disaster, who will believe Pendleton designedly omitted all reference to Longstreet's disregard of the "sunrise" order, if such had been made? To shield his powerful friend and commander, would Pendleton scruple to point out the real delinquent? His subsequent superserviceable zeal in behalf of "imperative duty" debars such a presumption. The report is peculiarly valuable because it describes in careful detail the preliminary examination for Longstreet's movement. It is not probable a serious error of omission would have passed unnoticed by Lee.

The report is introduced here, not exploit Pendleton's tergiversation, but to emphasize the uncertainty that still prevailed at Lee's headquarters on that morning. It will destroy many illusions of Lee's misguided friends, who are unwittingly doing deadly injury to his military fame by magnifying the mistakes of Gettysburg and ascribing them to another. Nearly every statement made by Longstreet concerning Gettysburg is either positively confirmed or strongly corroborated by Pendleton, The theory on which he is assailed is destroyed by this report. It is not difficult to divine why Pendleton's report is never alluded to by those who cling so fondly to his sunries story.

NO FINANCIAL RELIEF IN SIGHT.

The action of the committees of the Senate and the House on Tuesday affords a slim prospect for giving the government the financial relief it so much needs—at least during the present session. The Senate has been surrendered by the Republicans to the rule of Populists and Silverites for the sake of a few petty offices, says the Philadelphia Ledger, and as a consequence the Finance committee of the Senate has apparently determined to report no financial measures of relief except bills providing for the free and unlimited coinage of silver. Not content with having the Senate pass a free silver coinage substitute for the House Bond bill, the Finance committee Tuesday ordered its chairman to report a similar substitute for the House Tariff bill. Mr. Quay sought to have separate votes taken on the Tariff bill and the substitute, but Mr. Hill, of New York, for political reasons, objected. He hopes to kill the Tariff bill by means of the silver substitute, well knowing that the latter cannot become a law. Mr. Quay, will, nevertheless, try to get the Senate to separate the measures, but it is doubtful whether he will succeed, for the silver senators, having determined to play the role of dog in the manger, cannot afford to allow any financial bill to pass the Senate except a free coinage measure.

On the other hand the House is opposed to free coinage, so a deadlock exists between the two Houses and it is possible that the President may not have the opportunity to act on financial measures which the country so much needs. The attitude of the two Houses toward each other tends to render doubtful the prospects as to which party shall elect the President in the coming fall campaign. The Populists and Free-Silverites in the Senate hold the balance of power now, though this was hardly thought to be possible several months ago, and who knows how much strength they may gather before election day or what offers may be may be made to them from either party for the sake of their votes? It looks now as though no price can be too high which brings power to the party that pays for it.

Not only the financial situation but many other features and phases of party politics seem very much muddled.

A DESPATCH from Washington says there is reason to believe that the silver Republicans in the Senate will almost unanimously vote to kill the substitute for the Revenue bill, believing that it is not in the interest, but disadvantageous to the silver cause. It looks as if the Administration men in the Senate who have vigorously opposed free coinage will vote to fasten that sort of legislation upon a Tariff bill for the purpose of killing it, on the ground that the end justifies the means.

THE OHIO Prohibition Amendment League met in Des Moines on Monday night, and terminated in a row, the women members denouncing vigorously the members of the Legislature who had voted for the "Mulct law" two years ago. It is claimed that this "falling out of the friends of Prohibition" is the "deathblow to all hopes of re-submission.

Annual Convention of the C. V. Sabbath Association.

The officers of the above association have issued a call for a convention of the association to be held in Shippensburg, Monday and Tuesday, February 24 and 25. Rev. A. R. Ayers is president and Rev. C. D. Rishel is secretary of the association.

Among the items or paragraphs in the President's call are the following:

One of the surest safeguards, for the perpetuation of our beloved country, for the advancement of the Kingdom of God, and for the benefit of humanity is the Lord's day.

The present frightful state of affairs regarding the desecration and the lack of observance of the Lord's day is alarming and must at an early day arouse the law-abiding and christian citizens to a determined and persistent effort to rescue this heaven-born institution from those, who wantonly and ignorantly endeavor to destroy it.

Greed and avarice have joined interest in order to further their own objects and are trespassing into the sacred precincts of God's holy day. Seekers after pleasure and sport wantonly desecrate the day appointed for the benefit of man and transform it into a medium of destruction. The Lord's day cannot be a day of rest and a day of sport at the same time. One interest after another, one corporation after another, one sort of frolic after another are crowding out the proper observance of the day and are substituting secular pursuits.

Let the entire Cumberland Valley from the Susquehanna to the Potomac be largely represented, every church, Sunday school, Y. M. C. A., W. C. T. U., Endeavor Society, Union and League be represented by at least two delegates and their pastor.

Able speakers will be present. The program promises to be interesting and instructive.

Pastors will you please bring this matter prominently before your people!

TOWN AND TOWNSHIP.

The Events of the County as Chronicled by "Review" Correspondents—Summary of the Week's News.

CONCORD.

Mrs. Lillie Lewis and son Wayne, Waterford, are visiting relatives in town.—Clair Landis, Newville, spent part of last week in our village.—Rev. D. F. Kapp, pastor of the M. E. church, Birmingham, spent last week with his aged mother.—Miss Josie Reed, of Juniata county, is spending some time with friends in our valley.—Mrs. Nankivel, Lancaster, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Seibert.

Roy McMullen had his ankle badly sprained last week while wrestling with a schoolmate.

The fourth quarterly meeting of Concord charge was held in the M. E. church Saturday and Monday. Presiding Elder J. B. Polsgrove, of Lewistown, preached Sunday night.

Oscar H. Little was elected to teach the unexpired term (3 months) of Miss Alice Light, teacher of Dickey's school near Bridgeport. Mr. Little is a graduate of Shippensburg Normal, class of '93. He took charge of the school Monday, February 3. Fannett township has a teacher that has had only four birthdays. She was born February 29, 1876, and will in a few weeks celebrate her fifth birthday, the last one she will have until 1904.

The young folks of Upper Path Valley held a party at the residence of Wm. Barr last Tuesday evening. The crowd numbered over sixty and all went home well pleased with the hospitality of Mr. Bair and family.

PATH VALLEY.

The new Tuscarora Valley railroad is stimulating Path Valley markets especially in grain. Last week dealers at Richmond offered one cent per bushel more for wheat than was offered by dealers in Chambersburg. This is because of the advanced prices offered at Blair's Mills to which point many people from the upper sections of the valley are hauling their wheat and other produce.

Republican politics are at a sizzling heat, especially since some of the recent announcements of candidates. There have been some and are likely to be more mutations in the prospects of candidates between now and convention day.

Mrs. Boyd Clendening, of Metal, has been granted a widow's pension on account of the death of her husband. She has received $695.25 back pension as the claim was long delayed. Mrs. Clendening is looking for a home for herself and children in which she will invest the money she has received. Several have been offered her.

QUINCY.

Twelve persons were added to the Radical U. B. church of Tomstown Sunday morning.

Stephen McFerren, Fairview schoolhouse, has sold his house and lot to his son, George, for $30. He will make his home in Ohio until March.

Monday of last week L. C. Row, near Altodale, slaughtered two large hogs that weighed, dressed, 407 and 375 pounds. Mr. Row always slaughters large hogs. E. C. Fitz was head butcher.

Sunday night week some person went to the residence of John T. Metcalfe, near Quincy, and poisoned his large watch dog. Mr. Metcalfe prized his dog very highly and regretted to lose him.

Recently some person stole six nice large hens from John Farney, near Quincy. The person that stole the chickens took the lock along but Mr. Farney says that he has the key and if they want the key they can come back and get it.

One of our oldest veterans at Fox Hill says he is about to take to himself a widow living at Altodale and quit keeping bachelor's hall. He says the one drawback is that he is afraid the calithumpian band at Fox Hill will turn out and give him a noisy reception.

Sunday morning a week an infant child of James and Josephine Moats died at its home at Fairview schoolhouse, after a lingering illness from whooping cough. It was aged about 4 months. It was laid to rest in the Quincy graveyard on Tuesday afternoon. Rev. George Perie preached the funeral sermon.

Following are the names of the pupils of Grove Hill school taught by Miss Blanche Young, who have not missed a day the past month: Minnie Rhines, Rose Gordon, Grace Gordon, Ella Newcomer, Elsie Funk, Julia Gordon, Barbara Cook, Nellie Funk, James Cook, Daniel Newcomer, Harry Biesecker and John Biesecker.

Mrs. Lydia A. Price, widow of Daniel Price, Five Forks, Thursday last received her pension voucher for $304.80. She will receive $8 per month as her widow's pension and $2 per month for each of these children, all of whom are under 16 years: Clarence W., Edith B. and Charlotte H. This amount will afford Mrs. Price and her family a comfortable living.

Thursday last the members of the Radical U B. church near Tomstown met at the homes of William Bluebaugh, A. H. Lohman and Abraham C. Stouffer and prepared a donation for their worthy pastor, Rev. George Perie. The donation consisted of flour, bread, potatoes, canned fruit, meat, lard, sausages, pudding, apple butter, apples, coffee, sugar, rice, beans and calico and other dry goods. Friday morning Mr. Bluebaugh hitched up his two-horse wagon and conveyed the donation to the home of the pastor, near Fayetteville. George Monn of Jacob, one of the prominent members of the church, and Abraham C. Stouffer started for the pastor's house. Rev. Perie and family were greatly surprised and expressed their gratification because of the very kind offering from the parishioners.

Of Interest to Pension Applicants.

An act was introduced in the Senate early in January which will be of interest to many applicants for pensions, whose claims have either been rejected or yet remain unadjudicated. The portion of the act to which we refer, after providing for appropriations for various services and claims in the pension department is as follows:

"During the fiscal year eighteen hundred and ninety-seven, in expending this appropriation, whenever a claim for pension under the act of June twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and ninety, has been, or shall hereafter be, rejected, suspended, or dismissed, and a new application shall have been, or shall hereafter be, filed, and a pension has been, or shall hereafter be, allowed in such claim, such pension shall date from the time of filing the first application, provided the evidence in the case shall show a pensionable disability to have existed, or to exist, at the time of filing such first application, anything in any law or ruling of the department to the contrary notwithstanding."

Monath, Hagerstown; Henry and Edward, Allegheny, Pa.; Lewis, West Newton; George, Harrisburg; Mrs. Anna Peiffer, near Chambersburg and Charles and Samuel of Chambersburg, the last of whom is the well-known builder and contractor. The funeral took place on Saturday afternoon, services conducted by her pastor Rev. Kroh, interment in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Mrs. Anna Shull, widow of the late Geo. S. Shull, died just before midnight of Friday at her home near New Franklin in the 86th year of her age after a brief illness. For 63 years she had lived on the farm on which she died, and her wish, that she might die in the home in which she had spent so many happy years of her life, was granted. Mrs. Shull was a member of the U. B. church and found much comfort in its means of grace and ministrations.

Mrs. Shull took her Christmas dinner with the family of her son D. J. Shull, in Chambersburg, at which pleasant occasion all her children were present. She leaves the following children: Mrs. Lantz, Lehmaster; Mrs. Skelly, New Franklin; S. P. Shull, Juniata Crossings, Bedford county; D. F. and Geo. A. Shull, Marion and D. J. Shull, Chambersburg. The funeral took place Tuesday morning. Interment in the new Catholic cemetery.

Mrs. Catharine Grove died at her home on West Market street on Friday morning, January 31, after an illness of several weeks from dysentery. She was the wife of George Grove. The family had moved in from St. Thomas township last spring. Her age was 63 years. She leaves beside her husband five sons and a daughter; John lives in Kansas, Eugene and William and Hezekiah in Hamilton township, Cyrus and Sadie C. at their father's home in Chambersburg. Mrs. Grove was a member of the Lutheran church and a most estimable woman.

On Thursday evening of last week, January 30, 1896, Isaac P. Irvin one of the most honorable citizens of Chambersburg, died of convulsions, or rather of paralysis, at his home on East Washington street, about 8 o'clock. He had been quite ill some weeks before, but had seemingly recovered and had resumed work in his shoemaker shop, and it was here he was taken with the illness that proved fatal in a few hours.

Mr. Irvin was 70 years of age. He was born in Hamilton township and always lived in the county. He was married three times, his first wife being a sister of George Swank, of Metal, with whom he learned the shoemaking trade. After working at his trade for a time he worked a while in a brick yard, but afterward returned to his trade and worked at it until his death. For many years he worked with Noah Heckerman and afterward with E. N. Hutton in whose employ he continued almost constantly until his death.

His widow and two daughters survive him. He was a member of Chambersburg Lodge I. O. O. F., and Chambersburg Council O. U. A. M., both of which orders attended his funeral in their respective bodies. He was also a member of the M. E. church, and though in some respects eccentric, he was noted for his integrity of character and his impatience with every form of what he considered wrong doing.

If all men were as honest and as firm in their purpose to do right as he was, the world would be far better than it is.

His funeral was conducted by his pastor, Rev. B. H. Mosser, Monday afternoon; interment in Cedar Grove cemetery.

A WORD IN PASSING.

Town and County Briefs With a Bit of Comment—happenings of the Week and a Forecast of Coming Events.

The W. M. R. R. is laying a long stretch of double track out from Madison avenue, Hagerstown.

M. W. Kissecker, of Greencastle, one of the best known Democrats in the county, is making no secret of his intention to be a candidate for county commissioner.

Alfred Hiberger, Sharpsburg, Md., found a bugle along the canal with the word "Christman" stamped on it. It is supposed to have been dropped on the retreat from the battle of Antietam.

Louis Weaver, for forty years foreman of the Harrisburg Telegraph, is dead. The Telegraph gives him a good obituary and says: "In all his forty years of duty in this office he never asked for or took a vacation."

Hon. A. N. Pomeroy and Mrs. Pomeroy returned from their southern trip Saturday evening. They had a very pleasant time and Mr. Pomeroy's letters to his paper, the Repository, telling what interested them, were read with pleasure.

Governor Hastings and Adjutant General Stewart visited the Scotland Industrial school on Monday. The visitors were serenaded by the band which is attaining remarkable proficiency. The Governor addressed the pupils in the chapel in the afternoon.

Geo. Newton Hoke and William Hoke, administrators of the estate of their late brother John B. Hoke, on Thursday sold the excellent farm near McConnellsburg, belonging to the state for $6800, to a Mr. Wilson of Pittsburg. It is Mr. Wilson's purpose to make the place his summer home, and a pleasant one it will make.

Those who watch the calendar and have noted that Sunday was "Groundhog Day" feel that the prophet who bases his predictions on the weather of that day as forecasting the weather for some weeks to come, is maintaining his reputation. There were shadows on Sunday but there have been none since except those made by artificial light.

Charles D. Gillan and Miss Annie E. Gerbig, daughter of Captain John C. Gerbig, were married at the home of the bride's parents, corner of King and Second streets, Thursday evening, by Rev. E. H. Leisenring of the First Lutheran church. The contracting parties are well known young people and both have hosts of friends who join in wishing them a happy and prosperous journey through life.

Two announcements in The Tyrone Times of February 1, 1896, inform the readers of that paper that C. G. Nissley, the former editor and publisher of that paper, has purchased the Carlisle Evening Leader and H. A. Thompson formerly of the Mount Union Times will succeed Mr. Nissley in the Tyrone Times. Mr. Nissley will move his printing outfit to Carlisle and Mr. Thompson will purchase an entire new outfit for his Tyrone paper.

There is a great revival in progress at the chapel near Tomstown, conducted by Rev. Perie of the Radical U. B. church. The meeting has been going on for several weeks. There have been twenty-three conversions and there are still eight at the altar. Rev. Perie is one of those ministers who go about doing good. He goes among the poorest families in that section and makes many friends by his loving, kindly disposition and his anxiety to save souls.

The pupils of Pine Grove school Hamilton District very kindly showed their appreciation of the efforts of their teacher, Miss Blanche Woodal, in their behalf. They gave her as a holiday present. a beautiful water set consisting of water pitcher and glasses, and a beautiful picture, besides a number of gifts from individual members of the school. The scholars each received a holiday present also, in the shape of candies, fruits, etc. There seems to be the best of feeling between pupils and teacher.

The local teachers' institute at Scotland this week—Friday and Saturday—promises to be of more than ordinary interest. The program was published in a recent issue of the REVIEW, and posters were printed at this office. Those who cannot attend all the sessions should, at least, hear the lecture on Friday evening by Rev. W. H. Washinger. It will be well worth hearing. All the teachers of Greene and Southampton townships should be present. There is no doubt that there will be large and appreciative audiences at every session.

We clip the following local items from the Hancock, Md., Star: Mrs. Jennie Cooper, had a chicken to die recently, and on examining it after death found it to contain two livers, each fully as large as a hog's kidney, and its intestines were few, and no craw, its liver completely filling up the hollow cavity within its frame.—Mr. Samuel Everts formerly of Timber Ridge, Fulton county, but now of Franklin county, a short time ago captured a large fawn about four miles above McConnellsburg, having followed the trail all the way from Dickey's Station a distance of fourteen miles.

Ex-Associate Judge George Hoop, and John F. Dishong, two of the oldest and most respected residents of Fulton county died at their homes, a few miles apart, in Licking Creek township, a few days ago, each having lived more than 86 years. Both were respected citizens and both had lived lives of usefulness in the community in which they died. Both were kind-hearted, honorable men and neither will need a monument to keep in mind his many deeds of kindness to his fellow men. All who knew them will speak kindly of both of them. This is all the memorial that could be asked of their survivors.

Brakeman Hit By a Bridge.

As a freight train was coming south from Shippensburg Tuesday morning about 11 o'clock, Howard Shafer who was standing on a box car was struck by the overhead bridge of the P. H. & P. R. R., and was knocked down but did not fall from the car. He was seen to fall, however, the train was stopped and he was taken to the station for treatment. He was brought to his home in Chambersburg on East Washington. There was concussion of the brain, but his injuries are not thought to be alarming. He has a sick wife whose condition was made worse by his accident. Mr. Shafer is a son of John Shafer, depot master, and has been on the road about a year.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

Items of Interest About You and Our Friends and Those Whom We All Know.

W. H. Shirley, Esq., of Southampton township, Mount Rock district, was a pleasant caller Thursday morning.

John E. Jones of Metal, is in town visiting his daughters, Mrs. J. W. McCormick and Mrs. R. G. Jones and other friends.

Miss Leila Witherow of Metal, has been visiting the family of Ex-Sheriff Jones for some days. She returned home yesterday.

Mrs. H. A. Bitner, of Scotland, has been quite unwell for several weeks but is now recovering. Mr. Bitner has also been suffering from physical indisposition for some time.

W. M. Watson and son A. P. Watson of Southampton, were early visitors to Chambersburg Monday. Both paid a friendly call at the REVIEW office and both like the new paper.

Messrs. J. C. Robertson and James Walker, of Concord, were among the early visitors at the REVIEW office Tuesday morning. Mr. Robertson being a subscriber took occasion to advance his subscription a year.

J. Mc. Wilhelm of near Metal, was in town the early part of the week looking after his political interests. His second year's subscription to the REVIEW is paid. He speaks very kindly of the paper and enjoys reading it.

Mrs. Mac Stinger of Chicago, is east visiting her mother and other friends in Fannettsburg and vicinity. Mrs. Stinger's health has not been good and she has come east in the hope of improving it. She expects to return to Chicago in the spring.

E. S. McCreary of Washington street, who has been ill for some time is recovering. He has given up the idea of blacksmithing for the present and will probably engage in some lighter employment. Mr. McCreary is an excellent mechanic and a pleasant gentleman with many friends who will be glad to hear of his gradual restoration to health.

Mr. James Hay of Hamilton, was in on Friday to testify his appreciation of the REVIEW by advancing his subscription, and stating that the paper suited him in type, make-up and matter. Our wish is that he may live long to enjoy the REVIEW, and that its success may increase in the same proportion in which it has been growing since its first issue was published.

The publisher of the REVIEW was delighted yesterday to receive a call from an old comrade, John B. Farr, commissary sergeant of the 11th Penna. Cavalry. Mr. Farr carries his years lightly. He is traveling for a responsible hardware firm, and living comfortably, when at home, with his wife and son in Elmira, New York. We were truly glad to see Comrade Farr.

A. J. Fisher and J. H. Bryan of Foltz, placed their names on the REVIEW's subscription list on Tuesday. They had been attending court Monday and Tuesday. Mr. Fisher has been a friend of the publisher for some years and manages to find him nearly every time he comes to Chambersburg. His visits and those of the friends he brings with him are always pleasant.

M. C. Clem of Tomstown, and W. G. Stoops of Roadside, were business visitors to Chambersburg yesterday. Mr. Stoops will visit his brother at Newville before he returns home. Mr. Clem was a friendly caller at the REVIEW office. Mr. Stoops is one of the earnest christian gentlemen of his neighborhood. He has been taking an active part in the revival work near Tomstown.

Among the many subscribers to the REVIEW who have kindly words for the new paper is George Chambers, Esq., who stopped the publisher on the street, to pay his subscription and give hearty expression to his wishes for the success of the new paper. A number of other members of the Franklin county bar have given similar expressions of approval, for all of which we are grateful.

Miss Grace McAllen of Fannettsburg, left Tuesday night for Knoxville, Tennessee, where she expects to spend several months with the family of her brother, John A. McAllen, Esq., of that place. Because of her amiability, charming manners and beauty, Miss McAllen is sure to make many friends whereever she may stop on her visit. We hope that she may have a very pleasant sojourn in the "sunny south."

'Squire George W. Swank, the newspaper correspondent and genial literary agent and assistant postmaster of Metal, was in town over Thursday night. He has been prevailed upon to accept the agency for the sale of the History of the Rocky Spring church, and, considering his age, which is almost 73 years, he is meeting with remarkable success in securing subscribers. So rapidly is his list growing that he is out-distancing all the younger solicitors for subscriptions. The 'squire is just as full of pleasant reminiscences of long-ago-times, before the war and during that exciting period, as a good chestnut is full of meat.

Among the most welcome visitors of last week whose names were overlooked were Mrs. Amos M. Miller of Mount Parnell, who settled the family subscription to the REVIEW for a year, and John H. Metz of Fort Loudon, one of the busiest and most conscientious merchant tailors in the state. Of course we were glad to have them call though the editor was not in to greet them. Mrs. Miller is remembered as one of those who helped to make school exhibitions interesting when we were all "little," years ago, and Mr. Metz will be remembered because of the personal kindness of his father to the writer in the days of a past generation. We are glad that these friends and hosts of others still think enough of us to extend their patronage and call when they can, with kindliest greetings.

Samuel Widney of near Burnt Cabins, that sturdy Democrat, who never seeks office but who always votes the ticket when the men named on it are of the right stripe, was in town on business over Thursday night. Mr. Widney is one of the successful farmers in his neighborhood, and is honestly accumulating something more of this world's goods every year. His sleep will be made all the sweeter because he carries a receipt for his paid-up subscription to the REVIEW. The happiness of Mr. and Mrs. Widney was materially increased in October last by the advent of a young lady who will find a comfortable home and unlimited affection, and has already become the boss of the family. Our best wishes are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Widney and the baby daughter, and to all other sons or daughters that may come to them.

JUDGE AND JURY.

What Has Been Done in the Court House This Week Thus Far.

The regular term of court for February was convened Monday morning at 10 o'clock, Judge Stewart on the bench. When the list of grand jurors was called, six failed to respond, one of them, John W. Bell of Waynesboro, is dead; the others were excused on account of sickness or absence. W. O. Appenzellar was appointed foreman. The constables of the different districts were called and reported. In Lurgan, Washington and Greencastle, each, a bastard child was reported. The roads in Antrim were reported bad, also the mountain road in Metal, to which the REVIEW has referred. A number of bridges were reported as needing repairs in several townships.

Upon the call of the roll of traverse jurors all reported except two. George W. Croft was appointed guardian of Sarah and Martha Clark, minor children of Mrs. Elizabeth Clark of St. Thomas township. A license to peddle was granted to Jacob Summers, a Guilford township soldier. Many petitions were presented to the court by the attorneys and orders were granted upon the same.

The following licenses were held over until Saturday, there being remonstrances against them: Samuel A. Fortney, First ward, Chambersburg; Mercer D. Haiston, Fannettsburg; James A. Bair, Dry Run; Samuel Sherman, Fayetteville; I. Rebok, Loudon, and the two following, were held over against which there were no remonstrance, John H. Mull and A. P. Newman, both of the Second ward of Chambersburg.

A petition was presented by divers citizens of Mercersburg, asking the court to order the landlords of that town to close the bars of their hotels at 10.30 p. m. Judge Stewart refused the petition and explained at length that it was no more in the power of the court to limit the number of hours per day in which liquor may be sold, than it was to limit the number of days in a year in which it may be sold.

There being no remonstrances presented against the following licenses they were granted. John Waidlick, Peters township; Paul John, Second ward, Chambersburg; E. L. Wesley, Second ward, Chambersburg; Jacob R. Keefer, Fourth ward, Chambersburg; A. J. Unger, Peters township; Emil John, Fourth ward, Chambersburg; James F. McFerren, Third ward, Chambersburg; A. L. Martin, Hamilton township; M. Homer Shirey, Second ward, Chambersburg; Jesse H. Mitten, Greencastle; John F. Dice, Hamilton township; Levi Brandt, St. Thomas; Hugh C. Cover, Roxbury; Daniel Barnett, Third ward, Waynesboro; John R. Gabler, Upper Strasburg; B. F. Welty, Washington township; W. H. Shank, Second ward, Chambersburg; Harry McCleary, Second ward, Waynesboro; Aaron Werner, First ward, Waynesboro; Wm. H. McKinley, Second ward, Chambersburg; J. F. Vanderau, Second ward, Chambersburg; Daniel Baer, Fort Loudon; George Lackhove, Mercersburg; P. Fendrick & Son, Mercersburg; Needy & Rouger, Washington township; Geo. K. McGaw, Washington township; George W. Kingle, Washington township; W. A. Hollebaugh, Quincy township; John N. Minters, Orrstown; Holtzworth & Miller, First ward, Chambersburg; Geo. Zullinger, Second ward, Chambersburg; David Mingle, Greencastle; James C. Eachus, Greencastle; Robert Johnston, Antrim township; J. C. Clugston, Third ward, Waynesboro; Benjamin Shockey, Second ward, Waynesboro.

The first case taken up was that of the Com. vs. Philip Barnes; charged with entering a building for the purpose of committing a felony, and the second count charged him with the larceny of a pair of saddle flaps. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty of the first count in the indictment, but guilty of the second count. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $5 and serve 15 months in the Eastern Penitentiary.

The case of the Com. vs. Lewis Helfrick, Edward Bender and Daniel Mickley, charged with entering a building to commit a felony, and larceny of cloverseed. They plead guilty to the charge and were each sentenced by the court to pay a fine of $5 and undergo an imprisonment at hard labor and solitary confinement in the Eastern Penitentiary for 14 months.

The case of the Com. vs. Raymond Gates, was next taken up. The defendant was charged with the larceny of a horse-power. This larceny was alleged to have been committed in Antrim township. It was shown by the evidence that a horse-power was taken from a place adjoining that of the prosecutor, by the defendant. This was an interesting case. The evidence was very contradictory. The defence consisted of an attempt to prove that this horse-power was purchased from the tenant on the farm, Mr. Bumgardner. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

Pearle E. Taylor, Esq., was appointed master in the divorce case of Lydia M. Whitmer vs. Charles F. Whitmer.

George A. Kyner, Esq., was appointed master in the divsrce case of Barbara A. Williard vs. Harry G. Williard.

The two cases of Com. vs. Michael T. Plumb charged with incestuous adultery, and the Com. vs. Michael T. Plumb, charged with assault and battery with intent to ravish, the Commonwealth having no evidence to offer, the jury upon the instruction of the court found the defendant not guilty in both cases.

The next case was that of the Com. vs. Bert Staley and Clayton Shatzer. The defendants were charged with assault and battery, alleged to have been committed in Greencastle on Christmas evening. The jury returned a verdict of guilty.

In the case of the Com. vs. Clayton Shatzer and Bert Staley, charged with assault and battery and resisting an officer. Staley plead guilty. Shatzer was called for, and not appearing in court, process was placed in the hands of the sheriff who proceeded to search for him. The court sentenced Staley to three months in the county jail for the first case, that of assault and battery, and sentenced him to eight months in the county jail for the offence in the last case, resisting an officer.

The grand jury returned upon the following cases as follows: Com. vs. James Sage, not a true bill; Com. vs. Hiram Reese, not a true bill; Com. vs. Thos. Elliott, not a true bill; Com. vs. Daniel Mann, not a true bill; Com. vs. Thomas Brown, not a true bill; Com. vs. Harry Duke, not a true bill.

In the case of the Com. vs. John Blair, the defendant was charged with felonious assault and aggravated assault and battery. This was a cutting or stabbing affray which took place in Montgomery township. The defendant, John Blair, is a boy of 16 years of age. It was shown by the Commonwealth that while in a fight or dispute about the possession of a horse, the detendant stabbed one, Harry Shaffer, who had been married the day of the occurrence. It was shown by the evidence that John Blair, the defendant, had charge of a horse which the prosecutor and Harry Blair took from his possession that day and which John Blair was trying to get from them when the cutting took place. The Commonwealth also attempted to prove that John Blair was a rival of Harry Shaffer and was jealous of him, and that he had made threats of killing him. The court instructed the jury that to convict the defendant on the first count of the indictment they would have to find that he intended to commit the crime of murder, and only failed in his design because the man stabbed did not die. The jury returned a verdict of guilty of aggravated assault and battery. John Blair was sentenced to the Huntingdon Reformatory.

In the case of the Com. vs. Harry Diggs the defendant was charged with a felony, the larceny of a pocketbook from the wraps of Miss Ida Wallace. The offence was committed in Waynesboro. The defendant was found guilty. Sentenced to $5 fine and imprisonment in county jail for 9 months.

George A. Kyner, Esq., was appointed auditor in the assigned estate of Wm. Ferguson of Guilford township.

The case of the Com. vs. George Hopple was taken up. The defendant was charged with the larceny of a wagon. The defendant claimed to have purchased the wagon. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

In the case of Com. vs. James Draydon alias Brown, the defendant was charged with assault and battery on oath of his wife Plead guilty. Sentence suspended and prisoner set free.

In the case of the Com. vs. James Draydon, alias Brown, charged with 1, aggravated assault and battery aud 2, assault and battery, on oath of Mary Stoner, it was shown that the defendant attacked the prosecutor in Central alley in Chambersburg and choked, struck, cut, beat and kicked her. The defence offered proof that the defendant was at Greencastle on this particular evening. The alibi was successfully proven so the jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

The next case was exactly similar to the previous one being another information by Mary Stoner against James Draydon, alias Brown. charging him with aggravated assault and battery and assault and battery. Alibi proven. Verdict not guilty.

In the case of the Com. vs. John Norman, the defendant was charged with assault and battery on the oath of Robt. Bray. This was a sort of a drunken fight which took place in Black alley in Chambersburg on January 11, 1896. By instructions of the court the jury returned a verdict of guilty.

In the case of the Com. vs. Thomas Jiles and Mrs. Wm. Cookie. The defendants were charged with keeping a disorderly house on South Main street in Chambersburg. The jury returned a verdict of guilty as to Mary Cookie and not guilty as to Thomas Jiles. Mary Cookie was sentenced to two months in jail.

In the case of the Com. vs. Margaret Guinn, the defendant was charged with assault and battery on the oath of A. E. Edwards. This case is on trial this morning and will be followed by the trial of Mrs. Wolff for adultery. There are two indictments against her for the same offence. This latter case has aroused great interest and the court room has been crowded every day this week on that account. The trial will likely occupy the entire day.

He Felt That Life Was Disappointing.

A rather unaccounted for death is reported from Fulton county as having occurred in Brush Creek Valley, two weeks ago. The Fulton Democrat's version of the matter is as follows: On Tuesday of last week, Elijah Duvall, son of William Duvall of near Akersville, went to Everett on his wheel, saying that he had heard of a job as engineer of a stationary engine, that he thought he could get. Coming home in the evening, he became so sick that he had to abandon his wheel on the way and walk home. Dr. J. G. Hanks of Rays Hill was at once summoned; and, when he reached the young man's bedside, he at once pronounced the symptoms those of mineral poisoning. The young man rapidly grew worse and died during the night. It is said he applied at a drug store in Everett for five cents' worth of strychnine but did not get it. Whether or not he committed suicide will probably never be known. No one can assign ony motive he may have had for committing such a deed.

The Fulton Aepublican states that the young man asked for a deadly poison at Masters' drug store. Being refused he went to Alexander's drug store where he purchased a box of ratsbane and started for home. On the way he took about a half ounce of the poison and went on so long as he was able on his wheel, but was compelled to abandon it.

He reached home very sick. His physician was brought as soon as possible but was unable to save his life. It was evinently a case of disappointment in love. Mr. Duvall was highly regarded because of his intelligence and probity of character; he had a comfortable home, kind parents and affectionate brothers and sisters, besides a host of friends. He had extraordinary musical talents and was a mechanical genius.

His death was the saddest that has occurred in Brush Creek Valley for many years, because of the excellent character of the young gentleman and the untimely ending of a promising life.

A Midnight Fire In Upper Strasburg.

Soon after midnight on Wednesday morning, D. E. Gabler discovered the furniture and undertaking establishment of his father Joseph Gabler to be burning fiercely. The neighbors were soon roused from their beds by the cry of fire and all turned out quickly to subdue the flames if possible. Notwithstanding all their efforts the progress of the fire could not be stayed. The building, which was a large log structure, contained something like 10,000 feet of the best dry lumber, besides an engine, lathes, saws, planes and planers, and a lot of other machinery, also a number of caskets and other articles of furniture, some of which was finished.

The loss in building, lumber, machinery, tools etc., amounted to over $3000 and included all Mr. Gabler's means of making a living. There was no insurance. Mr. Gabler's sons and a number of other hands were employed in the establishment. Some friends of Mr. Gabler were in Chambersburg yesterday soliciting contributions to enable him to purchase machinery and stock and resume business. Mr. Gabler has been in the business in Upper Strasburg since the war and is an honorable business man and a good mechanic. It is a pity he did not have at least some insurance on his plant.

Watterson's Lecture on Lincoln.

Henry Watterson's lecture on Abraham Lincoln, in Rosedale Tuesday evening, was one of the ablest and most merited tributes ever paid to a statesman by any orator. There was no flattering, no extravagant eulogy, but the greatness of a great man whom the orator believed God had raised up for a special purpose, was told forcefully and truly, in a way that must have impressed every one present with the power of the orator as such and the greatness of the man of whom he spoke.

Judge Stewart most appropriately introduced Mr. Watterson to his audience, in words that could not have been better chosen.

The disappointment in Mr. Watterson's not reaching Chambersburg Monday evening as had been advertised is fully explained. He had lectured in Hampton, Va., and took a boat for Washington, expecting to reach there Monday morning, but on account of the heavy fog the boat had to go very slowly and he was a number of hours behind time in reaching Washington. He regretted the delay as much as did the people of Chambersburg.

The very inclement weather kept many away who would have been glad to hear him, still the audience was large and it was certainly very appreciative.

It was a great lecture on a great subject by a man fully qualified to perform the duty he assumed.

Council Meeting.

At the meeting of borough council Monday evening it was stated as a matter of business that Councilmen Rice and Minnich had contracted with Capt. Calvin Gilbert of Gettysburg, for four regulation gun carriages for the cannon on the public square.

The Board of Health was granted an annual appropriation of $200 to be paid in quarterly payments.

Chief Swisher reported 42 arrests during January.

Treasurer E. J. Black reported borough receipts for January, $4,082.10; paid out; $522.23; water and light receipts, $1,162.78; overdrawn, $2,022.25; paid out, $977.31; bond receipts, $3,394,-67; paid, $642.52; available cash in borough, water and light, $1,722.99.

The electric light statement shows income for January, $1,232.30; opereting expense, $694.42, construction, $68.93. In the month 73 incandescent and one arc light were added.

Supt. McGrath's water report shows 14,764,300 gallons pumped at Siloam and 10,107,000 at steam plant, a daily average of 802,300 gallons.

Market Master Over reported $89.30 receipts.

The Taylor Works.

On Monday Sheriff Greenawalt made return of the fi. fa. against the Taylor Engine Company. Part of the personal property was not sold for want of buyers, this was caused by Mr. Golden of Philadelphia, in his failure to pay for the property that had been knocked down to him. The real estate was condemned under inquisition held on Friday and will be sold as soon as it can be legally advertised.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1896.

LOVE'S LABOR LOST.

The Rev. Cecil Varian's study was, in its way, as attractive and nicely decorated as a lady's boudoir.

There is something essentially refined and feminine in the nature of a cultivated man, and Mr. Varian liked to surround himself with beautiful things.

In this occupation, fortune and destiny seemed to aid him. Mr. Varian was rich, single and handsome, and, moreover was the spiritual pastor of a church which boasted of goodly proportion of young ladies. These two combined facts might well account for the embroidered screens, the braided slippers, the cigar cases and the point lace tidies which surrounded our young paster in his learned solitude.

A low, clear fire burned on the hearth; the carpet was of deep purple velvet, and the silken window hangings matched it exactly in color. A statue of Psyche in the oriel window was half hidden by the creeping vines which grew about its pedestal and grasped with green clinging tendrils at salient points, and a rare old painting of the beautiful "Madonna and Child" hung above the carved black walnut mantel. A banner of tarnished blue silk, brought from a Jerusalem convent, was festooned over the doorway, and an Eastern chibouk, relic of Cecil's Oriental travels, occupied a stand beside the book shelves. As for these latter they were filled with scarce editions, scented Russian bindings and illuminated folios, and the very inkstand on the desk was of costly bronze, simulating a Vesuvian incense cup. A Swiss vase of violets diffused a soft odor through the rooms, and the young pastor himself looked singularly handsome in his black velvet dressing gown, with a book in his lap.

"But this won't do," said Mr. Varian, flinging aside the volume of Tennyson over which he had been dreaming. "I must call on Miss Applewood, and read to little Charlie Cowper yet, this afternoon."

Miss Applewood was the only daughter of Mr. Hugh Applewood, the rich tea merchant. Miss Applewood, albeit she had been only a dashing society belle, up to the time of Rev. Cecil's dawning on the social horizon, had suddenly become anxious about her soul.

"I have been so giddy, so unreflecting, all my life." Miss Applewood said, with clasped hands and down-drooping lids. And Mr, Varian could not help thinking how lovely she was, although it never once occurred to him that Miss Valencia Applewood was in love with him.

Miss Applewood was a spoiled child. All her life long she had just what she wanted, and it did not seem among the possibilities that anything could be beyond her reach, even the favor of Mr. Varian. "It would be so delightful to be the mistress of that lovely little gothic rectory," she thought. "And I could be perfectly happy if he loved me."

Miss Applewood made herself especially agreeable to her pastor when he called that afternoon—agreeable in that soft, beseeching sort of way which always appeals directly to the sympathies of the stronger sex.

She knew that Varian was fond of music, and she sang him a new Easter hymn which was just out.

She was well aware he was a finished biblical scholar and she begged him to explain a knotty possage in the Old Testament, which she declared had always puzzled her.

She volunteered to visit any of the sick poor on Mr. Varian's list, to whom she could be useful, and she gently hinted that she did not intend to forget Mr. Varian's birthday which was only a few days off.

"Only a bit of simple embroidery," said Valencia, blushing delightfully, under the dark light of Mr. Varian's handsome eyes, "but it is the work of my own fingers, and I should like to do a little something for one who has done so much for me."

Valencia Applewood had never looked prettier in her life; and if the Rev. Cecil Varian had been a man of impulses, he would have been tempted to propose for her then and there.

"What a minister's wife she would make" thought he. "So artless and ingenuous—so anxious to help in the cause—so amiable and innocent."

"And Mr. Varian went away, thinking that he would seriously consider the question of offering himself to Miss Applewood, as soon as he reached the sanctum of his study.

"It is not good for man to be alone," pondered the young divine, "and Miss Applewood is certainly a pattern of loveliness and piety!"

But the next place at which he called soon dissipated these reflections. Cecil Varian was quite in earnest in his work, and when he knelt by little Bobby Elliott's sickbed, in the dreary back room of the tenement house, his whole soul was in the pious words that he poured from a full heart.

Bobby was dying of hip disease—dying slowly, and in agony—and Bobby's mother and sister were forced to toil hard to keep bread in their mouths. Mr. Elliott was a skilful confectioner, and superintended one of the departments of a fashionable restaurant—it is hardly necessary to add, at starvation recompense. Mr. Bruttini was engaged in making his own fortune, and accordingly ground down every one of his subordinates to the lowest possible point of wages. What was it to him whether they lived or died, so long as he drove his carriage in the park, and boasted of the price of his high stepping horses!

And Polly, the eldest sister—little Polly, with the red cheeks and velvet blue eyes, stayed at home to take care of Bobby, and eked out their slender livelihood between whiles by taking in fancy work at any remuneration she could get.

"But where is Polly, today?" said Mr. Varian, looking kindly around when he had comforted Bobby with a few kind words and timely suggestions.

"Please, sir," said Bobby, in whose eyes the young pastor was neither more nor less than an angel of light.

"She's a-cryin', in the back bed room!"

"Crying! What for?"

"Polly is in a deal of trouble, she is, sir," answered Bobby, wistfully.

"But crying never mended any trouble yet. Call her, my lad."

And Bobby, lifting his weak, piping voice to its highest treble squeaked out, "Polly! I say Polly, Mr. Varian wants you! He says it's no good cryin', and no more it ain't!"

In obedience to this summons, Polly crept in, with heavy eyelids and pale face; a dimpled sixteen year-old child, just blossoming out into the rich promise of womanly beauty.

The pastor laid his hand kindly on her head.

"What is it, Polly? Tell me," said he:

"Please sir," faltered Polly, "I got a job of work to do—braiding on velvet, sir, with gold braid, a gentleman's slipper case, sir—and I was to have five shillings far it. It was a rich lady gave it to me, sir, through mother, as helped her out with the salads and pastries and things for a grand party. But—I don't know how it happened—but a drop of Bobby's bitter medicine got on the gold braid and discolored a bit of the pattern. We've tried our best, sir, to take it out; and indeed, indeed, I don't think anybody as doesn't know of it before hand would notice it; but the young lady is awful put out, and has made me pay for the material, besides losing all my work."

"Let me see it, Polly?" said Mr. Varian, kindly.

Polly brought her work—a slipper case of black velvet, braided in complicated patterns, with gold and gilt berries, with long gold tassels drooping on the side. Mr. Varian had to look twice before he discovered on one of the leaves a tiny tarnished spot.

"That's nothing to signify Polly," said he. "Look here, I'll take it, and pay you for it."

"Oh, but you can't sir," said Polly. "The lady is to call for it tonight."

"Why she has no right to it, after you have paid for the material!" cried Mr. Varian.

"I don't think she has, sir," answered Polly. "But, all the same, she insists she'll have it, and said something about the police when I made bold to ask if I couldn't keep it."

Varian's brow darkened; he did not like to view human nature in this aspect.

"I am sorry for you, Polly," he said. "Here is some money for you. Get Bobby some oranges and a glass of jelly. And I'll speak to the landlord about waiting a little for the rent when I go down stairs."

So Mr. Varian went away, thinking moodily about the velvet slipper case, and the greed and rapacity of its owner.

Just three days subsequently to the events above described, a little scented package arrived for the Rev. Cecil Varian—a package wrapped in silver paper, tied with a white ribbon, and accompanied by a card.

"With the best wishes and birthday congratulations of Miss Valencia Applewood."

He opened it, his calm pulse moving with a quicker thrill, perhaps, than before, and there lay the velvet slipper case with its intricate pattern of ivy leaves and gold berries, its long, drooping tassels and the very tarnished spot over which Polly Elliott had shed so many unavailing tears.

Cecil Varian frowned and set his lips. Then sat down and wrote a brief and scathing letter:—

"My dear Miss Applewood:—

I chanced to be a visitor at the house of Mrs. Elliott last Monday, where I saw the enclosed article, and heard its whole history. Permit me to decline accepting a gift marred with tears, smirched by the stain of injustice and rapacity, and coming hither under the false pretense of being your own work, when it was in reality embroidered by Mary Elliott,

Yours very truly,

CECIL VARIAN."

Valencia Applewood burst into tears of anger and futile mortification when she read this, by no means, reassuring note.

"Was ever poor creature so unfortunate?" sobbed she. "How was I to know he would find out it wasn't my work!"

And so the handsome young pastor escaped the Scylla and Charybdis of Miss Applewood's lovely eyes, and the young lady herself discovered that there was one thing in the world which her money and her beauty could not buy—the love of an honest man's heart.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The TIMES is a newspaper for intelligent men and women who want to read all the news of the world every day. The paper has distinguishing merits of its own. It is neither sensational nor dull. It is not sour-tempered. It is not frivolous or visionary. It sees plenty of good in the world and tells about it. It tells of the bad when it must, but not unwholesomely. It prints with fullness the record of human endeavor in many fields outside of business, politics and war—in literature, religion, science, art, sports and household matters. No paper in the country prints so many book reviews and so much book news. No paper has so complete a financial page—a daily manual for investors and officers of financial institutions. Its market reports—wool, cotton, breadstuffs, farm products, &c.—are the best in the country.

The Democracy of THE TIMES is of the old-fashioned sort—as old as Thomas Jefferson: majority rule, no bossism, no machine tyranny, the divorce of politics from private money-making, a sound currency, industrial emancipation, and every-day honesty. To promote the advance of the Democratic party along these lines it labors with heart and conscience and all its might.

The map, which has on its reverse side a complete map of the United States, has been adopted by numerous school districts in the State, and is the best and latest map issued. It is worth much more than the price of subscription but is given away freely to subscribers to introduce the paper to their notice in the firm belief that those who become acquainted with the merits of the New LEDGER will not be willing to give it up.

During 1896 the PUBLIC LEDGER'S former high place in journalism will be not only maintained, but advanced by improvements in every department, in the extension of its news service, literary attractions, and special features. To enable the publisher to make the proposed improvements, and to meet the steadily and rapidly growing circulation of the LEDGER, Messrs. Hoe & Co. have constructed for it and are now erecting four new Sextuple Presses of the latest and most approved design. These presses will increase the facilities for rapid printing 25 per cent., enhance the typographical appearance of the paper, and give more distinct impressions.

The LEDGER is first of all a newspaper giving all the news of the day, classified and in complete form. In the PUBLIC LEDGER every statement is verified, its news is therefore thoroughly reliable.

Outside of its news department (which includes special correspondence from all the important cities and towns in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware) the LEDGER is an illustrated family newspaper of exceptional interest and value, giving special attention to domestic affairs, religious news and comment, social events, games, sports, the fashions of the day, literary, art, farm and garden, scientific and labor notes, building society notes, etc.

To its Special New York and Washington correspondence, long since rendered famous, it now adds letters from the chief Capitols of Europe.

Its financial news and market reports are complete and reliable.

The Saturday issue is a great compendium of every phrase of social life, containing reading matter to suit every taste, compiled specially for the Saturday Edition of the LEDGER. Its treatise on the International Sunday School lesson is alone worth the price of subscription.

Its classified advertisements are as interesting as news and as widely read. The public has for years made the PUBLIC LEDGER its chief vehicle for the announcements of births, marriages, and deaths.
